Breakup opens door to Satur, but Bongbong stays as guest bet the authors' efforts to identify the impact of the intervention on the health status of the study population.

the 1990s, the number of people who have been infected with HIV has increased significantly. In 1990, there were about 1 million people living with HIV in the United States. By 2000, that number had risen to about 4 million. And in 2008, it was estimated that there were about 12 million people living with HIV in the United States. This is a dramatic increase, and it is a reflection of the fact that HIV is a highly contagious virus that can be spread in a variety of ways, including through sexual contact, sharing needles, and from mother to child during childbirth. The good news is that there are now many effective treatments available for people living with HIV, and these treatments can help to keep the virus under control and prevent it from spreading to other people. However, it is still important for people to take steps to prevent HIV infection, such as using condoms and avoiding sharing needles. And it is also important for people to get tested for HIV regularly, so that they can know their status and take steps to protect themselves and others.
